

University of Sassari

The University of Sassari is involved in higher education processes and vocational training.

Its interest in gender medicine is testified by the institution of a three years long PhD course in "Gender aspects in pharmacology". Furthermore, the interest in the specific field of the project is evidenced by various initiatives such as an experimental e-learning course in gender pharmacology for medical doctors and pharmacists, that has been hold last years.

Moreover, it has organized in Sassari and in Rome (October 13-14, 2004, and 2006) two courses entitled "Drug response in women" the latest with credits for continued medical education for physicians and for pharmacists.

In November 26, 2007, it has organized a course entitled "Health determinants: a gender approach" in Rome (Università di Roma 'Roma-Tre) for the PhD student in biological science. Efforts have been conducted to inform general population through conference, and articles in lay media.
